

Programme Outcomes and Course outcomes

Program Outcomes (POs) POs are the definite statements about the knowledge, skills, and attitudes (attributes) of the graduate expected to accomplish after the completion of the course. POs generally assesses the competencies and expertise a graduate attain after the completion of the program.

Programme Specific Outcome (PSOs) is the attributes attained by students that enable them to pursue higher studies and to qualify competitive examinations in respective disciplines.

Course Outcome (Cos) is the end result achieved by a student by learning a particular course/Paper of the programme. In order to design the curriculum, the POs, PSOs, and COs, are the basic and essential requirements. The Board of Studies for each Course, constituted by the University, sets the curriculum which is intended to meet the envisaged goals and objectives with regard to the knowledge, skills, and attitudes the students should have gained at the end of the graduate/Postgraduate program. The Board of studies is responsible for defining the set of POs, PSOs, and COs according to the revised syllabus.

The College has identified Programme Outcomes (POs), Programme Specific Outcomes (PSOs), and Course Outcomes (COs) in tune with the mission and vision of the College.

The Course Outcomes (COs), Program Specific Outcomes (PSOs), and Programme Outcomes (POs), for all Programs offered by the Institution effectively communicate to the stakeholders by,

1. The syllabus of all programmes is available on the college website which contains POs, COs of all programmes. This is available both to the faculty members and the students.
2. Programme and course outcomes are made available in the individual Department sections of the college website.
3. The institution Keeps a three-tier system of maintaining and propagating the stated outcomes to all stakeholders. Initially during the orientation programme, at the beginning of the academic year, there would be a general lecture on the specific learning outcomes and objectives. At the department level orientation programme, the head of the departments would elaborate the programme outcomes. At the bottom level, the class teacher will explain the detailed programme specific outcome and hard copies of the programme outcome will also be distributed to the students.

4. Above all, the teachers of each department will interact with students during their admission, after the admission and explain to them in detail the importance of each programme, course, and its outcome.
5. Bridge Courses conducted by the departments are clearly sharing POs and COs. The institution also keeps the teachers and students informed about the system for assessing the POS and COs.
6. The attainment of Learning Outcome is evaluated at two levels: Continuous Internal Evaluation (Centralized Internal examinations, class tests, seminars, assignments, term papers, attendance, etc.) conducted by the institution and the End semester examination conducted by the University
